

SANDLER CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS

PARKING AND PROP LOADING/UNLOADING GUIDELINES

All individual dance companies should provide to the Sandler Center production team, via the loading dock manager, a contact name and number for their prop person prior to arrival. This will help when scheduling loading and unloading of props and truck/trailer parking. If a contact person is not provided before arrival, timely unloading of props may be delayed.

Each dance company team will be allowed to unload props for THAT DAY in the morning. Each dance company should remove props from the loading dock that evening (any changes in times will be communicated to the dance companies by competition staff). All props should be removed each day unless that dance has made the finals and there is adequate room in the loading dock to store their props. Besides the loading dock, there will be designated spaces on the street for loading and unloading across from the docks. Unfortunately, overnight parking will not be available in these spaces. You must find your own overnight parking. Sandler Center does not control the patrolling of these spaces and will not be able to assist if you are ticketed.

Bank Street (loading dock street) will have spots reserved by Sandler Center security to secure these street spaces for the day. Again, you may not stay there overnight without risk of getting a ticket.

All trucks will be asked to have a contact name, dance company name, and contact number in the windshield of the vehicle at all times along with a Sandler Center parking pass. If you do not have these, you risk getting a ticket.

All props that come with the dance companies must be taken away when they leave. Any props left may cause the promoter to incur a cartage fee. Storage space in the loading docks is limited so please be courteous to your other dance companies and work with the Sandler Center production team to ensure a smooth rotation of props.

Thank you and feel free to reach out if you have any questions.
